THE HISTORY OF SATTERTHWAITE BURIAL GROUND

In November 1866 Montague Ainslie of Grizedale New Hall gave by Deed of Gift three roods of land in Washdale Parrock, Satterthwaite, for use as a burial ground. The Bishop of Carlisle consecrated it in March of the following year, the local newspapers describing the land as a pleasant spot selected for the last resting place of the dead of Satterthwaite and Grizedale and a well-chosen piece of picturesque ground that rests snugly in the last rays of the evening sun. The Satterthwaite Church accounts for 1890 show that the sum of 2s. was expended on purchasing a spade for the cemetery, difficult work for the gravedigger as the land consists of a thin layer of soil on top of solid rock.

When the burial ground opened, the former rough pasture had been transformed into parkland with gravel paths, and a slate and stone storage building in the southwest corner. To ensure that all family members could be buried close to each other, the initial graves were dug in isolated family pockets all over the parrock, the unused land in between only being used once the graveyard became fuller. Very few accurate records exist of who is buried and where, as earlier burial ground plans were littered with scribbles and illegible pencil markings. This plan was compiled and drawn following the completion of a field survey of the burial ground in 2007.

Numbers in brackets refer to burials mentioned in headstone inscriptions whose exact whereabouts are unknown.
Ashes marked with initials have no register numbers.
